resent one-tenth of the electorate. "Le Figaro" set the tone of the affair. French press yesterday with an "Franco-Israeli relations seem on the way to improving." Rene Bauduc, the newspaper's correspondent in Jerusalem, reported that, apart from the thorny probtem of the arms embargo, relations were improving in every field. The French journalist said: "France for its part avoids irritating Israel by spectacular - and useless - statements about the occupation of Arab territories by the Jewish state." However, well-informed sources here point out that France continues to cast its votes consistently against Israel on every resolution at the U.N. concerning the Middle East. The French delegation's declarations in favour of the "legitimate rights and aspirations" of the Palestinians hardly confirm the argument that France is abstaining from statements offensive to Israel.

The sources recalled that the French Covernment continues to present its Middle East embargo as a specifically anti-Israel measure. This was the argument developed by French ministers to Libyan Prime Minister Abdel Salam Jalloud here last mouth.

Jalloud was given all the assurances he requested on the continued delivery of Mirage warplanes. But the French authorities were so embarrassed about his visit, but for a probably still be a closely-kept se-

French envoy says talk with Eban routine

By DAVID LANDAU

Jerusalem Post Diplomatic Correspondent The French Ambassador, Francis Hure, said yesterday that his meeting with Foreign Minister Abba Eban had marked no new departure in French Middle East policy.

He told The Jerusalem Post that newspaper reports of the meeting had shown "too much imagination." Israeli newspapers reporting on a briefing by a senior Government official wrote yesterday that the ambassador had asked for the interview in order to persuade Mr. Eban that Jerusalem took too negative a view of French policies towards Israel. Some newspapers detected in this the first signs of a change in French policy.

Mr. Hure explained to The Post that the meeting had been a "reg-ular tour d'horizon," which was felt to be appropriate since he had not met the Foreign Minister since the summer. The two usually meet at frequent intervals for such wideranging reviews of the political sittuation, he explained, but first Mr. Hure and then Mr. Eban had been abroad and for that reason they had not met for some time.

Mr. Hure agreed that he had cuss telecommunications. But the urged the Foreign Minister to take Syrians were probably nearer the more cognizance of the positive aspects of French policy toward Israel, but emphasized that there was nothing novel or extraordinary in his doing so. A priceless painting of the Madonna (above), by the Renaissance master Giorgione, was recovered by Italian police yesterday after a gun battle and car chase. Police set up road blocks after an anonymous telephone tipster told them the painting, stolen 11 days ago from a cathedral in the Venice area, was to be moved. A sports car forced its way through a road block and police gave chase, firing on the car, and catching the driver. Alfredo Barbiero, 23. They made him take them to his house where they found the painting, klown as the Castelfranco Madonna, undamaged.

Investigators of the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) said the Delta, on its way to the terminal, was apparently in the wrong part of the runway. They were waiting to question the ground controller who was supervising the taxiing plane. The controller, whose name was not given, was reported to be in a "state of collapse" and could not be questioned.

"We don't understand why the Delta aircraft was on that side of the terminal," an FAA spokesman said. "Under normal circumstances it should not have been there. Europe to join U.S. space plan

BRUSSELS (UPI). - Europe hitched its space effort yesterday to the American star. Ten European nations decided after a nine-hour meeting to accept in principle the U.S. invitation to join in the post-Apollo programme for the "akylab" and "space shuttle."

Belgian Science Minister Theo Le Fevre, chairman of the meeting, said he would send a letter to Washington yesterday, talling the U.S. government that "we will collaborate."

The meeting, held in the shadow of the successful end of the Apollo-17 flight, was called to rescue the European space programme from a decade of mild progress and spectacular failures. In that decade, only six European satellites have been launched — all on U.S. rockets. Europe's attempts to launch its own "Europa" space rockets have all failed rockets have all failed.

The meeting had two major pro-posals before it — to join in the post-Apollo programme, using American launchers, or to take part in a French-inspired programme for an independent European launcher called the "L-3s," with France putting up 60 per cent of the cost, in the end, the ministers decided to do both.

But a communique left each na tion free to opt out and said final decisions must await studies of costs and other factors. Britain, for one, said it would stay out of the French rocket project.

Swing to left as France announces election

THREAT TO GAULLISTS

Jerusalem Post Correspondent PARIS. —

DREMIER Plerre Messmer's announcement that France's 30 milhion voters will go to the polls on March 4 and 11 means that Christmas spirit is giving way to election ment's decision is no surprise, although there had been uncertainty whether President Pompidou would owed their majority to the massive before the spring.

But the election date was not the only unknown factor in the minds of the electorate and of their repmains whether the current erosion holds water. But a visit by of the majority's popularity will Pompidou to the motherland of confinue to gather momentum. If Communism is bound to make the this happens, the Gaullisti risk French disciples of Lenin more palting themselves out of office atable in France.

Latest polls

The latest soundings taken by the Sofres, the reliable opinion poll, shows that only 38 per cent intend to vote for the Gaullists and 45 per cent for the left-wing coan-tion. The reformers — the middleof-the-roaders headed by Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber and ex-presidential candidate Jean Lecanuet — can expect to mop up 15 per cent of the ballots cast.

But in France, the electorate go Sundays. In the first vote they select their favourite candidate. FRANCE LOOKS INWARD

THE effort this week by the French Ambassador in Israel to persuade Foreign Minister Abba Ehan that French policy in the Middle East is less hostile to Israel than Israelis generally believe is in itself a welcome development.

Such sensibility to Israel opinion is itself a basis on which better relations might be built in the future.

However, it is also true, as Mr. Eban reportedly told the en-voy, that there have been no signs of any basic change in France's generally partisan pro-Arab posture. The arms embargo remains in effect, even as the Paris Government chooses not to acknowledge that French planes are being supplied to Egypt through Libya, and offi-cial French declarations on the Middle East are almost without exception designed to court Arab

Israel has learned to endure this French attitude and the abruptness with which it was en-unciated in 1967, while at the

PUNISHING IMMIGRANTS

THE Government's Revenue Department may have acted too hastily in effecting the new tax rules for immigrants. Those rules, announced this week, do away with a series of benefits originally designed to ease an important's absorption immigrant's absorption. Admittedly, these privileges occasionally proved abrasive. Some of the public, and the bureaucrats directly charged with administering these regulations, resented these perquisites offered to newcomers, although they were limited to a three-year period and designed speci-fically to ease the process of absorption. The rationale for the curtailment of most of the benefits is — in the Treasury's own words "unfair exploitation" of those benefits. Officials even offered a bizarre illustration: of approximately 20,000 cars imported this year, they said, 160 brought in same time retaining its confidence that, in due time, more bal-ance will be restored to French

In the months ahead, and per-haps contrary to President An-war Sadat's hopes, no signifi-cant initiatives can be expected in French Middle East policy. For with elections to the Nafor with elections to the National Assembly in the offing and an apparent sharp decline in Gaullist popularity, France will be focused inward on the real challenge to Mr. Pompidou posed by the Left coalition led by Mr. Mitterrand.

It may be the case that, in these circumstances, the French Government would like to trim Government would like to trim some of the surface thorns in relations with Israel. But more fundamental departures of policy, whether favourable or unfavourable from Israel's point of view, must await the French electorate's determination of where it thinks France should go and under what kind of leadership.

as the property of immigrants or disabled persons were found to have been re-sold illegally. One need not be a statistician to wince at this chain of reasoning.

Especially puzzling is the ban on duty-free gift parcels from abroad. For a period of 36 months, a newcomer could enjoy such free contact with his family abroad. It seems Customs agents discovered the contents of a few such parcels up for sale a few days after they had been cleared by customs. But as a result tens of thousands of immigrants can no longer receive such gift packages.

Since the nation's express policy is to encourage immigration. and since immigration from western countries — those most affected by the new rules — has dropped sharply, the Finance Ministry would do well to review

INFLATION: LET THE PEOPLE KNOW

HE Governor of the Bank of Israel, Mr. Moshe Sanbar, has spelled out in exact figures what everybody was suspecting: that inflation is gaining ground and damaging the economy, and that the Government is not taking edequate measures to check its edvance. His forecast has been given due publicity. but is unlikely to affect the course of events. One may even wonder for what purpose the warning was given.

Mr. Sanbar cannot have been trying to make his voice heard by the Government. For that he did not have to convene a press conference. Moreover, he has already submitted to the Government two reports on the excessive rise of the means of payments this year. Both reports included detailed recommendations. Can he have expected that unsolicited advice through the press would be better heeded than his other warnings?

It is untikely that the Governor intended through his press conference to enlist the support of the Knesset. His reports in the part have been addressed also to the Knesset Finance Committee, which could have acted long ago if It wished to interfere, or were able to. But nobody — least of all the Knesset itself - expects our parliament nowadays to act other than as the Government's sounding board,

The Governor's warning cannot either have been addressed to the public, which has no say in the shaping of our economic policies. Moreover, is not the current inflation caused largely by programmes intended to endear the Government to the public on the eve of

Trade union pressure

As a matter of fact, on the same day that Mr. Sanbar issued his warning against the riding tide of inflationary wage increases, the Histadrut's Secretary-General, Mr. Yiizhak Ben-Aharon, announced that the trade unions would step up pressure to be recompensed for the rising cost of living.

Mr. Sanbar's gravest argument has been about the increasing diversion of resources to private consumption. But who in this country is frightened by this prospect?

Per capita consumption was planned to rise about four per cent this year, double the amount recommended by economists. Actually it seems to have risen about six per cent. For the next year 8.5 per cent has been forecast, but the figure may be more,

Private consumption absorbed about onehalf of the total increment in economic resources in 1972, as compared with 13 per cent in 1970. In 1973 it will probably devour most of the expected GNP's increment, leaving lit-tle to either investment or export. Still, most must defeat its own purpose.

Mr. Sanbar must have been aware of this, and yet he appealed to the Government to ceduce the people's purchasing power by IL900m. in the next budget year, equivalent to about the doubling of the purchase tax, or to a 25 per cent increase in income tax or to cutting more than one-third of the Develop-ment Budget.

The time has come not only to impose unpopular deflationary measures, but to enlist popular support for them, writes POST Economic Editor Moshe Ater.

Whether or not he was aware of this, he has thus exposed the malaise of our democratic system in which the executive operates virtually without effective brakes.

The Governor of the Bank of Israel is the Government's economic adviser — but no more than that And if his advice is disregarded — as it usually is — the Finance Minister is not expected even to give his reasons, because we have no expert unbiased body to discuss the issue, thoroughly.

However, the Governor's warning should be seen also from another angle. It is unlikely to be taken too earnestly because it is not actually intended to warm the people as it adheres to the established pattern of policies imposed by the authorities without taking the public into their confidence.

Mr. Sanbar forecasts that if his proposals for the 1973-74 budget are not followed prices will go up as much as this year, i.e. et least 12 per cent, instead of the six to eight which planners consider the safety limit. But that limit is already based on the cost increases that took place this year, part of which could have been avoided. And the Governor himself has given his blessing to the wage accord, which was the starting point of this year's inflationary development.

Exceeded wage agreements

Admittedly, most wage agreements have exceeded the limits originally set for them, and the current strike wave was not fore-seen by the inner circle of economic planners. For this the planners have nobody to blame but themselves, and their presumption that free people can be made to accept objectives fixed from above without being consulted.

If wage-earners were made to understand that the most they can achieve is an improvement of, say, three to four per cent with stable prices, most of them would probably forgo wage increases of 20 and more per cent plus infistion, as recommended by the trade unions.

There would remain guievances of groups claiming that they are discriminated against, but these disputes can be settled only by mutual consent, and never by piecemeal ac-tion, since yielding to one group immediately leads to a snowballing of other demands.

The man in the street may be excused for failing to grasp this complex mechanism, but the authorities concerned could have warned and educated him while there was time. Instead, they yielded to the popular appetite and let inflation proceed. Now, after the unions and the action committees have tasted blood, and with price controls approaching their breaking point, the authorities are cry-

But why should the merry-go-round be stopped just at this moment? There is no special emergency in sight. And nobody is going to believe that there is a basic difference between an annual eight per cent inflation and 12 per cent. It is this discretionary character of Mr. Schbar's appeal which must make it ineffective. Inflation can be held in check — in spite of all odds — only if people oppose it and blame themselves (and the authorities) for not preventing it.

If Mr. Sanbar is right, that we are heading for disaster (or a slowdown), the change should not be confined to technicalities, such as tax rates or size of subsidies or access of private firms to the capital market, or even another forced loan. This is not to deny the importance of such measures, but while they may stave off imminent danger they are bound to be resented, and likely to generate

It was the forced man collected in 1970-1971 — unaccompanied by appropriate policies in other fields — that led to the upsetting of the wage truce. It is the fear of a voters' revolt that hinders Finance Minister Sapir in in-troducing the Value Added Tax. Authoritarian methods do not work well in a democratic

Unpopular measures

The time has come not only to impose un-popular definitionary measures, but also to try to entist popular support for them by admitting mistakes, faunching reforms, and — first and foremost — starting a genuine pubite discussion about the pros and cons of the current economic policy. It is a policy which embraces uncontrolled public spending programmes, a free-for-all among trade unions, lavish subsidies for consumers and monopolisis, labour shortages and inflation, Surely an effort should be made to clear up the issue before the Government and the Historiut proceed farther on their present collision course.

Some other countries are trying new methods of settling economic problems, and there is no reason why larged should lag in this respect. For instance, in the Netherlands, rid-den by inflation, an agreement was signed recently similing wage rises on condition that number of social reforms are carried out by the government. In Britain, Malcolm Crawford, the "Sunday Times" economic editor, has suggested a flat income surtax at the rate of the eventual rise in the C.o.L., so that people would be penalized for increasing money in-comes and prices not only indirectly (as con-sumers) but also directly (as earners).

In the U.S. the Exchange National Bank of Chicago recommends a new "flexible" tax system that would be adjustable to shifts in the income level of the public.

Recent surveys of the OECD have shown that high taxes and welfere (transfer) payments may contribute to inflation-prone more than the public is aware. Note of this amounts to an economic panaces. But when one is faced with a serious economic medalise - as in this country - none of this can be

The reason given for this measure was to allow the police to spot-check for illegal transfer of ownership or tenance of such a blatant sign of or the use of these privileges will only German canton has in Switzer- serve to widen the gap between pient and the government, and should not be publicly displayed. The tax-free status of vehicles is always clearly indicated in the vehicle licence fiself, obviating any further sign. The argument that the white border helps police to track down illegally-transferred ve-hicles is not convincing, since any-one unscrupulous enough to obtain a vehicle illegally will find the small matter to remove the white border, thus rendering him immune to spot checks. I therefore urge the Gov-ernment to reconsider their deci-sion, as elimination of an outward ign tagging its bearer as "foreigner," "immigrant" or by the same token, "invalid" would be a positive step in the direction of successful orption of ammigrants.
